To Wed a Wild Lord

Like everything daredevil Gabe does, pursuing Virginia Waverly is a high-stakes game. Ever since her brother, Roger, died racing Gabe, Virginia has yearned to take her revenge on the reckless lord by beating him at his own sport. But when she challenges him to a race, the hellion who has always embraced his dark reputation as the "Angel of Death" counters with a marriage proposal!

Gabe knows Virginia's family is in dire financial straits—why shouldn't she marry him and solve both their problems? She claims to be appalled by his proposal, but her response to his kisses says otherwise. So when the two of them begin to unravel the truth behind Roger's death, Gabe takes the greatest gamble of all, offering the courageous beauty something more precious than any inheritance: true love.

"A grand mistress of storytelling."

Interview with Miss Virginia Waverly Before Her Race with Lord Gabriel Sharpe

PARASOL PAPERS: What prompted you to make this scandalous challenge?

Miss Waverly: I mean to make Lord Gabriel stop strutting about town, showing off his prowess at racing.

PP: Why do you care?

MW: It was my brother's death that gave him his awful nickname.

PP: I thought it was his complete disregard for danger.

MW: That, too. He's a reckless gentleman even when alone in a stable with . . . with . . .

PP: With whom?

MW (blushing): Ah, the race is beginning. I must go.

PP: And there you have it, dear reader. Miss Waverly is determined to stop his lordship's reign of recklessness. Though we do wonder how his lordship could have been reckless in a stable. Or how Miss Waverly could have known, unless . . . well, we'll leave you to speculate.

A Hellion's Guide to Courting Ladies

By Lord Gabriel Sharpe

- Tricking a lady into dancing with you is fine.
- Tricking her into letting you court her is even better.
- Complimenting her is always a good idea.
- Behaving recklessly in a race against her is not.
- Stables are great places to do a little kissing.
- Mazes are not (too public).
- The best way to win her heart is to win her trust.
- A little seduction never hurts.
